International Structured Finance and Derivatives

The financial crisis of 2008 and recent scandals in the banking sector have shown that professionals exposed to Financial Markets are required to have a good understanding of Structured Finance and derivatives which form an important building block in risk management for corporate, investors, arbitrageurs and project financiers.

This program will allow the attendees to examine various practices related to structuring, documentation and execution of structured finance and derivatives transactions.

It will provide the participants with the tools to analyze and critically assess financial products. Practical cases and examples will be utilized to illustrate the good practices as well as potential abuses of these financial instruments.
